

Ravenwood Manor.
A chilling autumn
evening.

Murder! A terrible crime.

"The lavender blooms in her room."

"I heard a shot
and footsteps
towards the gardens."

A man with dark hair and a mustache, wearing a dark blue suit and tie, stands next to a woman in a maid's uniform. The woman has brown hair styled up with a white lace headband and is wearing a blue dress over a white apron. They are in a room with bookshelves, a lamp, and a window showing a landscape.

"I noticed Mr. Markham was acting strangely."

A detailed illustration of an elderly man with voluminous, curly grey hair and a mustache, wearing round-rimmed glasses and a dark blue suit jacket over a light green shirt and a patterned tie. He is seated at a desk in a study, surrounded by floor-to-ceiling bookshelves filled with books. He is smoking a long-stemmed pipe, with a plume of smoke rising. On his desk, there are several open books, a quill pen, and a small lamp. A portrait hangs on the wall behind him.

"An ancient harvest goddess cult! The fabric, the message... it's all connected."

"Cause of death:
gunshot wound."

A hidden room...
and a note.

The truth will be revealed...

Professor Winter... the killer.